

The Squatter Sovereign.

ATCHISON, NOV. 14, 1857.

THE NORTH AMERICAN HEMP AND COTTON PLANT.—We noticed the fact some time since, in the Merchants' Magazine, of the discovery of this singular production, by a Mrs. Beaumont, growing wild in the southwest part of Wisconsin. The discoverer, as we learn, has since cultivated it with great success, having now some fifteen or sixteen acres of it growing on her farm. A correspondent of Life Illustrated has furnished that journal with an interesting description of the plant, and the editors have been appreciative of the produce, and express their surprise at the value of the discovery. Mrs. Beaumont thus describes it.

From a single root that I transplanted, there sprung up about twelve stalks, each bearing fifteen to seven feet each in height, having upwards of three hundred pods containing the cotton, with about fifty to sixty seeds in each pod. It can be planted in the spring, and may be cut in the fall; it branches itself almost white as it stands in the field, and yields from three to four tons of good hemp or flax to the acre. The hemp or flax is the produce of the stalk, and the cotton is the head or bulb of the plant. It requires but little labor to cultivate it, for when once planted it will remain in the ground for several years, throwing out fresh shoots and stalks every year. The hemp (when stripped from the stalk) requires to be dressed, of course, and the flax should be heckled in the usual way; the cotton, too, should be dressed with a cotton gin, the same as they dress cotton grown in the South. I believe that this plant may be cultivated in any part of the world, and I think it will grow and thrive on almost any soil, (if it is not too stiff) but rich black loam suits it best.

The discovery of this valuable plant proves at once that cotton can be grown in the North as well as in the South, and it may produce a great revolution in the cotton trade. The specimens of the plant that we have seen are as follows: No. 1. A specimen of the course hemp, before it is dressed. 2. Specimen of the hemp or flax, dressed, but not bleached. 3. Specimen of the bleached flax, ready for combing and carding. 4. Specimen of the bleached flax, combed and carded. 5. Specimen of the bleached flax, carded with a little wool. 6. Specimen of the bleached flax, spun into coarse and fine threads. 7. Specimen of the knitting-work from the coarse and fine thread. 8. Specimen of the raw cotton, fine quality and middling. 9. Specimen of half cotton and half wool, carded together.—Hunt's Magazine.

PRESERVING APPLES AND PEARS.—As the present season when our fruit ripens are thinking about putting up their apples and pears for winter use, we can do no greater favor in that line than to republish from our columns the method of preservation adopted by Mr. Edward M. Davis, of Chelton Hills, as written out by himself. Specimens of the apples were presented at the last June meeting of the Philadelphia Society for Promoting Agriculture, and were as sound, fresh and plump as if picked from the tree the day they were exhibited. The flavor of the Redding, particularly, was unchanged, and that of all of them very little injured by the lapse of time since taken.

Mr. Davis, speaking of the apples:—
"They were kept in closets, in a cold cellar, free from moisture. These closets are made of ordinary lumber, with tight fitting doors. The shelves are made to slide that they may be removed at pleasure, so as to afford free circulation of air, and only far enough apart for a single layer of apples on each, and about half an open pan on the floor of each closet. The apples were hand-picked, and without more than ordinary care, were taken to the cellar and put upon the shelves, one bushel filled three of them. Those showing signs of decay were removed. The Winter Pennsylvania and the Roman Sweet retained their flavor till the middle of March. The Cider apple was much better than in December, but before April became mealy. The variety known here as the Regular, but which I think is the Redding, still retains its qualities, and I have no doubt can be kept until August. Another Apple, and a few Russets, are the only kind upon which I have tried this experiment. The total cost of the five closets, capable of holding fifty bushels, was $14."

We think this method of preserving apples and pears, comes nearer common sense than anything we have yet seen.—
The result proves beyond doubt the complete success which has attended it, and the cheapness of the contrivance, which would last in a cellar at least twenty-five years, should induce every one having fine fruit to try the experiment.—Germantown Telegraph.

THE SECKEL PEAR.—The Seckel is the best native pear known; it has a high, spicy, honeyed flavor. It bears its fruit in clusters at the ends of its branches. It ripens from the first of September to the last of October. It was sent to Europe by Dr. Hosack, in 1817, and the fruit produced by the London Horticultural Society exceeding in flavor the richest and best of their autumn pears. The fruit is very small, except on rich land. The following account is given of the origin of this pear:—
"About 50 years ago there was a well known sportsman and cattle dealer in the city of Philadelphia, who was familiarly known as 'Dutch Jacob.' Every season, early in the autumn, on returning from his shooting excursions, Dutch Jacob regaled his neighbors with pears of an unusually delicious flavor, the secret of whose place of growth, however, he would never satisfy their curiosity by divulging. At length the Holland Land Company, owning a considerable tract south of the city, disposed of it in parcels, and Dutch Jacob then secured the ground on which his favorite pear tree stood, a fine tract of land in Delaware. Not long afterwards it became the farm of Mr. Seckel, who introduced this remarkable fruit to public notice, and it received his name. Afterwards the property was added to the vast estate of the late Stephen Girard."

The original tree still exists, (or did a few years ago) vigorous and fruitful. Specimens of its pears were quite recently exhibited at the annual show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society. Country Gentlemen.
